Conquering one's hurts, habits, and hang-ups shows character and determination. You overcame, but what's next? Do you find yourself unable to obtain needed job training to reach financial sustainability in order to provide for you and your family? Are you tired of hearing we'd love to hire you but with your history...? Societal stigmas along with cyclic and systemic barriers can be overwhelming, feeling as if there is no use to try to improve oneself. Rise Up Hagerstown is here to assist you in this next step.

If you have worked to overcome your past experiences, to be a better person, that is something to be applauded because it is hard work. It should not exclude you from being eligible to advance your education and ultimately your career and financial sustainability. But far too often, our past is used as reason to deny us that opportunity. The Rise Up Hagerstown Board of Directors is pleased to announce that our second-chance education opportunities have expanded, creating more opportunity for you to rise up and soar. Our scholarship programming still includes Barr Construction Institutes trade programs but has expanded to include select programs in While keeping your other avenues of support intact such as your recovery group and support networks, begin training for a new career to gain charge of your financial future. Finances affect one's emotional health in a major way. This combined with the emotional and mental health advances you already made in your recovery can help advance you to the next level of success and happiness.
